PARWICH GOES POTTER!

On Thursday 3rd March 2011, Parwich Primary School became 'Hogwart's School of Witchcraft and Wizardry' with the children and staff alike dressing up as characters from 'Harry Potter' for World Book Day.

The moment the children got to the playground gate, they were greeted by their Headmistress but needed a password (which was 'Hedwig') to enter. There were many activities to celebrate World Book Day including: Word searches and two potion classes where children made the Relashio: a releasing spell which makes things fizz and bang (breaking your restraints) and the Impervius: a separating spell where the children used different amounts of sugar and water to make multicoloured liquids of different densities that each floated on top of one another.

All the children enjoyed themselves and when asked if he was enjoying the day, Reuben (who dressed up as Draco Malfoy) replied, "Yeah, I'm really enjoying it and I really like Sam's costume!" Sam went as an amazing Harry Potter.

Overall, the school loved World Book Day and really hope to raise some more money for their book fund by doing it again next year with another amazing theme. How did you celebrate World Book Day?
